HELGE HELGENSEN DIES

Helge Helgeson, died at the Killarney Hotel, Chauvin, on Tuesday, April 1st 1919.

He was born in Voss, Norway, and has no relatives in this country.

He was located in twp. 33 east of the meridian. He gave one acre of his farm for the building of a Lutheran church, and said the remainder to Thor Thorson, who took care of him towards the end of his life. He had been a sufferer from rheumatism and consumption for a few years, previous to which he was a robust man.

He was a member of the Normanna congregation. We knew him for a long time and was to the end a firm believer in the atoning blood of Jesus as the one way of redemption. We knew him as a good man and are sorry to lose him.

He was laid to rest in Normanna Cemetery Saturday, April 5th. Rev. T. M. Bakke officiating.

ODDFELLOWS & REBEKAHS HAVE SOCIAL EVENING

A most enjoyable evening was spent at the social given by the Odd fellows and Rebekahs last Wednesday.

Two sketches were admirably performed by some of the boys and were much appreciated.

A hat trimming contest by the gentlemen was also much enjoyed by all.

Two prizes were given for the best trimmed hats and a booby prize for the worst.

Mr. Hawthorn won first prize. Mr. Keatly second prize; the booby prize was won by Mr. Berry, who was paying an official visit to the lodge.

After trimming the hats, the gentlemen gave them to the ladies whose names they had drawn.

Mrs. Roy invited the ladies to her home the next day to have their pictures taken in their new spring hats, and so proud were the ladies of them that they paraded the town afterwards visiting all the stores and displaying their much be-flowered and be-feathered millinery.

ROBERT MCCLUSKEY DIES FROM HEART FAILURE AFTER SUDDEN ILLNESS

Sad is the tragedy that has visited the home of Mr and Mrs W. McCluskey during the past brief two days, and never has the sad force of bereavement been more strongly shared by every dweller in Chauvin.

As recently as noon, Monday, Robert McCluskey was playing with a friend, W. Cahill. Early in the afternoon, and without any warning alarming symptoms became manifest. Dr. Folkins was summoned, without delay and attended the lad. Dr. Smith, of Edgerton, was also summoned and he arrived in remarkably quick time. They succeeded in relieving the lad, and it appeared as if they would be successful. Robert spent a far easier night and at 4.45 asked for his medicine, this was administered, and the lad asked his father, who was tending him, not to leave that day. His father promised him this, and the lad then quietly expired from heart failure.

No words can express the deep poignant sorrow that fell upon that home or the sad whispers that passed up town that Robert was dead. Such a hush has never fell upon our town before, and we trust will never fall again. Robert, the strong healthy lad, we all knew loved and respected. Robert, who was kind to every other lad, Robert, who had a smile for us all. Robert, ever ready to lend an helping hand, Robert was dead, and Ah! so suddenly. Strong men, the women and his school mates, alike felt the blow. Many an eye was dimmed by tears of sympathy for the bereaved parents and their sad loss.

The funeral was conducted from the home. Rev. J. C. Anderson officiating. There were present not only the members of the bereaved family and the relatives, but also the pupils of the local school in full muster, and a full representation of every section of the community. After singing the grand old hymn "Safe in the arms of Jesus" every man's head was bared whilst Rev. Anderson lead in a most appropriate prayer. A short passage of scripture was read, and a brief, and equally appropriate sermon delivered. The service concluding with one of the favourite hymns of the Chauvin Sunday school "I am so glad that our Father, in heaven tells of His Love in the Book He has given" and a prayer. Four boy friends of the deceased, Donald Saul, Harry Heffern, Holmer Seegar and Leonard D'Albertanson acted as pall-bearers and the long procession composed of the family, relatives, the school children, and those who wished to pay their last respects, in all 24 rigs, 11 cars, and children and a number of men on foot, wended their way to the cemetery, where the body was laid in it's resting place.

Many and beautiful were the floral tributes laid upon the grave: amongst which we noted; spray from Mr and Mrs L. E. Roy, wreath from Mr and Mrs L. E. Roy, anchor from primary department; wreath from intermediate department; anchor from high school; wreath from Sunday school; star from Westminster Ladies Auxiliary; wreath from Mr and Mrs Bingham; wreath from Mrs D'Albertanson, Sr., flowers in which contributed by Mesdames Andrews, Swan, Hawthorne and R. Pierce; wreath from Mr and Mrs Allan; spray from Mr and Mrs Saul.

The deceased, Robert Dewey McCluskey was born at Lost River, Quebec, 22nd August 1904 and died Tuesday April 8th 1919, at the age of 14 years and 8 months. He was looked upon as one of the most promising lads in our midst, a general favorite with each citizen in our district. The cause of his sudden death was Oe-

LETTERS TO EDITOR

DINA ANSWERS WALSH

To the Editor
Chauvin Chronicle
Dear Sir:-

May I trespass on your valuable space to reply to a letter you published recently, purporting to be written by a Mr. T. J. Walsh, of Shulishburg, Wisconsin, which contains a direct reflection on the district of Dina—Having had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Walsh, it is to me inconceivable how a man of his travel and intelligence can make such absurd and erroneous statements—Mr. Walsh states that he travelled 4000 miles and could count the number of schools on the fingers of one hand—We can only conclude from this statement that he either travelled in the "arms of Morpheus" or started his trip from say, Cold Lake, and travelled 4000 miles North—to the Pole perhaps and over the top.

Mr. Walsh's statement that there are no country school houses in Western Canada is a gross misrepresentation of facts. If he will kindly re-honor Dina with a visit—he may be assured of a "warm" welcome and we will show him—right on the section which he owns—or did own—the most modern up-to-date type of country school in the whole Province—we admit that the school was not built when he was here, but contrary to his ideas, the district has not stood still since 1915, but has progressed, until we venture to say that in NO part of the country between Lloydminster and Chauvin, will be found, better houses, better barns, or better

INSTITUTE MEETING WAS A BIG SUCCESS

The directors of the Chauvin Agricultural Society deserve praise for the splendid meeting last Monday evening. Everyone stated they had had a good time and expressed their wish to have other evenings of similar character.

Mrs T. H. Armour gave a splendid report (which we hope to publish next week) and the program was well rendered. Perhaps it was a little short, but by general consent, it was voted full of quality. Piano Solo, Miss Godin; Report and address, Mrs. Armour; Song, Mr. L. B. Nicholson; Instrumental Selection Mrs. L. S. t Jean; Messrs. M. M. Cook, G. Tessier, A. Nachtergaele; Song, C. Kirby, "When the Bonnie Heather's Blooming Smile" Piano Solo, Mrs. L. St Jean; Song, Mr. L. B. Nicholson, "Queen of the Earth"

A ten minutes community conversation followed, after which lunch was served. Dancing till midnight closed a very pleasant and enjoyable evening.

living conditions than in Dina—
In conclusion—his remarks as to the settlement being composed of Norwegians—"with one exception" is true—The unhappy "exception" is the writer of this letter, and he wishes to inform Mr Walsh—that it is the Norwegian element at Dina which has made it the prosperous and flourishing district it is.

Mr. Walsh's remark that "many occupants of farms" had to move in the night" is laughable, we would advise Mr. Walsh that if he intends spying out the land again here, to move IN in the night, and beat it before morning, we have no doubt that he will see as much as he did on his 4000 mile trip.

I beg to remain,

GREEN MEADOW MURMURS

The Green Meadow Local U.F.A. held it's regular meeting on April 4th, and not-with-standing the stormy weather the attendance was good and the interest keen. Seventeen members were voted in. Plans were laid for the completion of the barn which has already been begun on the school grounds. All members and any one else interested are invited to bring their lunches and their hammers and give a hand to the work. Coffee will be served. The date set is Friday April 11th.

The President called a meeting of the Board of Directors to be held on Wednesday evening April 9th at Iven Wiley's to plan and outline the work of the U.F.A. for the ensuing months. The next regular meeting will be held on Friday, May 2nd. at 8 p.m..

PARABLE OF THE SOWER (Up To Date)

1. Behold the couger went forth to cough.
2. And when he coughed, some germs fell upon the side-walk, and the feet of the pedestrians came and gathered them up, and carried them into their homes.

3. Some fell into nostrels that were hard and unfruitful, and forth with a slight cold appeared. It was not worse because there was much opposition to them, on account of the sterility of the soil.

4. And when the sun was up these colds were scotched, and because they had no root these colds withered away

5. And some fell in thorny places, such as those that have an immunity, and in this wise were choked.

6. But others fell into good ground for them, and brought forth much disease; some an hundredfold, some sixtyfold, and some thirtyfold.

7. Who hath ears to hear, let him go forth to the Health Department and view the great harvest of pneumonia, tuberculosis, la grippe and bronchitis, all of which is of record in the archives of the Department.

8. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear the cover story of our people were garnered, during the year of our Lord 1918, from the seed of the cougher and sneezer, and now sleep with their fathers in their untimely sepulchres.

9. Be ye not of those who, having eyes, see not those things which we have herein set forth that so nearly concern their temporal health and salvation.

10. Muffle the cough, smother the sneeze and expectorate not in public places; to the end that divers and greivous disorders come not unto thee nor unto thy neighbor.

11. And remember now the teaching of the Health Department that thy days may be long in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.

—John Dill Robertson, M.D., Chicago Bulletin.

SCHOOL MEETING AT BRADY

There was an interesting meeting of the ratepayers of the Brady school district last Saturday. The meeting lasted from two in the afternoon until seven in the evening. Having been informed that the meeting was more interesting than educative, our reporter called for the minutes over the telephone. All the unfortunate hunter for news could learn was that "eight voted for and nine against" What was the object of the vote, why they took so long over this business, or what other business came up, our readers would like to know.

BLACKLEG PREVALENT AMONG CATTLE OF THE PROVINCE

Considerable blackleg is prevalent among cattle of the province at the present time and the Department of Agriculture is sending out notices to be posted throughout the country warning the farmers and telling them of the symptoms, etc

The disease is described as a germ disease of the most pronounced type; the bacteria causing the trouble enter the body of the animal through abrasions of the skin, but perhaps more commonly through the mucus membrane of the intestinal tract, the infection being conveyed by contaminated feed or drinking water. The symptoms of the disease are quite characteristic and pronounced and its diagnosis is rather easy. The cattle lose their appetite and become listless, they also develop lameness. When an animal with blackleg moves it moves stiffly and lies down frequently. Swellings develop on the body rather suddenly, they usually come about the thighs, neck, shoulders along the back and one side of the chest. These swellings are caused by the accumulation of gas under the skin. When the swellings are pressed a crackling sound results like the sound peccuring in the crushing of parchment.

The only reliable preventative agent is vaccination with blackleg vaccine.

This is injected beneath the skin and the vaccine is administered usually behind the shoulder or on the side of the neck.

The Workmen's Compensation Act, 1918 provides that every employer of labor coming within the scope of the Act, shall forward each month a statement of his payroll to the Workmen's Compensation Board at Edmonton.

Some of our fun has been augmented by the following incident.
At one house after the usual spring cleaning the man of the house unable to locate very useful and necessary tools etc, in his search for a screw driver, in exasperation asked the good lady for it or the whereabouts of it. She was good enough to anticipate his wish by offering a cork screw.

Nearly as amusing as the stove being removed to another place in the house and the man of the house not being aware of the move in his waking hours bided his footsteps in the same old track, but lo and behold it was a buffet without the usual warm water.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

AN IRISHMAN'S LUCK

Sunday—Mr. Jordan, who had come back to the Dingle for dinner, had started off for his nine-mile drive to his afternoon service, the boys—Bert,
the two Dennises and Chris Raye—were smoking on the verandah, and Marion Enderby and Evelyn were washing up the dishes with the rather erratic help of Daisy.

'Wasn't that a lovely sermon we had this morning, Evelyn, Mr. Jordan is a dear old man—'

'Daisy, you should not speak of Mr.
Jordan like that,' rebuked Marion, 'he is not an old man.'

'Well—he's a dear anyway—and if I talked about a "dear young man,"
you would say it was not proper—do you know, Evelyn, I can tell just as soon as he gives out his text how his garden is looking at home. Now, as soon as he started this morning—"For lo, the winter is past, the rain is over and gone, the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land"—aren't those just lovely words to hear in church—I knew just as well as if I saw them that his bedding plants had got a good start without wilting, and that he'd have the earliest green peas in town.'

'Daisy, you should not rattle on about such things—Evelyn will think you have no reverence for anything.'

'Oh, no, she won't, she will feel just like Mr. Jordan, for she knows the grubs haven't taken a single one of the stocks she put out last week—I m sure when everything is looking lovely we were meant to be happy about it—only each one in our own way—Mr. Jordan's way is early spin-ach and green peas, Evelyn's way is double stocks and mignonette, and Bert's way is spring wheat and the litter of little Berkshire pigs, and mother's way—I could see it in her face in church—was just a lovely sad happiness, and she was thinking of the old Rectory garden in Liecest-shire and the path through the woods to the Hall—and the bluebells and lilies of the valley and the wood pigeons cooing in the tree-tops, and—'

'Now, Daisy dear, that will do for your imagination—and what was your way?'

'Why, my way was the tennis court;
I felt sure there were not going to be any holes in the bottom corner for the water to stand in, and that Dad would get me a new racquet and that—and that—'

'And what else did the sermon promise you?' asked Evelyn, laughing heartily as Daisy stopped suddenly and blushed

'Well—it's shocking, but I'm a regular little Washington sometimes—it promised that the boys should have lots of time to play, and that they should play mixed doubles as if that were just the kind of tennis they lived for'

'Well, you and Evelyn had better go out on the verandah and talk it over with the boys and see if they will help you to realize your hopes—I don't know about Bert and Mr. Raye, but I expect the Dennis boys will fall in with anything which does not look too much like work.'

'And I'm sure Chris will be keen to play,' said Evelyn, 'he is a little short-sighted and not a very good player,
but there weren't many of us to play in the village at home, and he's used to play anything with girls.'

'That's a comfort,' said Daisy, emphatically, 'some of the English boys round here have got so high and mighty that they only play with Marion and me as a great piece of condescension—now, come along, Evelyn,
and be sure you back me up if Bert begins to make difficulties about not sparing the time or any foolishness of that kind—you know he won't snub
you in the brotherly way he does me.'

The two girls passed from the lean-to where they had been washing the dishes into the living-room and thence on to the verandah, where with unexpected good fortune, they found that the prospect of tennis was already the subject of conversation.

'You have come at just the right moment, Miss Raye,' cried Tom Dennis jumping up from the old deck-chair in which he had been seated, and offering it to Evelyn, while Daisy, declining the offer of the hammock from Chris Raye, sat down on the verandah forstep—'of course, we haven't been having a tennis meeting exactly, but just suggesting what plans we would make for the summer if it wasn't Sunday.'

'Now, Tom Dennis, don't you dare to pretend that you have a Scotch conscience—for it's not a bit necessary
—I have quite persuaded Miss Raye and Marion that Mr. Jordan was giving us a dispensation to talk tennis on Sunday when he preached this morning—though I don't suppose you know what the text was—you do!
Well, don't try to repeat it, and we'll not expose our ignorance—now, what are you boys going to do about tennis?'

'Why, we thought,' said Bert, 'that we might settle to play every Saturday afternoon, at any rate till haying begins, and then perhaps make up a little party to go down to Minnedosa
and play in the Tournament there—'

'Oh that would be great,' cried Daisy enthusiastically, 'you don't know what a swell time they have at the Tournament, Evelyn; they've got lovely courts down there, and everybody wears their prettiest frocks, and they have afternoon tea, and everybody that can play goes in for all the open events, and those that can't play go in for the handicaps and try to wiggle
out with a prize in the end'

'Well, Miss Raye, I don't think you had better trust too much to Daisy's ideas of the Tournament,' said Bert,
'I'm afraid just coming from England
it may not strike you as such a thrilling experience—but we may get some pleasure out of our quiet little games
here at home, and we thought as next Thursday is the Queen's Birthday and really a kind of holiday, we might have our first game then, and ask three or four of the other boys round, and mother and the girls would provide afternoon tea and so forth.'

'Oh, we'll look after the tea,' cried
Daisy, 'but what time can we begin—it's nearly five when you get home from school, Evelyn, and it would be too bad to begin without you.'

'Oh, you mustn't think I'm going to work when everyone else is playing,'
said Evelyn laughing, 'we are going to have a holiday at school, at least the children are coming to school in the morning for what the Educational Department calls "patriotic exercises," but I shall be home again by the middle of the day.'

'Why, what are "patriotic exercises," Evelyn?' asked her brother. 'We used to do Latin and French exercises at school, but I never heard of patriotic exercises; do you teach patriotism out of a book like Latin Grammar, and conjugate the royal family like an irregular verb?'

'Of course not, you foolish boy,' replied Evelyn laughing, 'it just means that the children will keep the Queen's Birthday by saluting the Union Jack and singing patriotic songs, and I shall tell them a simple sort of story life of Queen Victoria, and there will be one or two speeches and then we shall all sing "God save the Queen."

'Well, I think that is awfully nice,'
said Chris Raye seriously. 'I don't think we do enough of that kind of thing at home; half the people don't even know when the Queen's Birthday is.'

'Oh, you don't know the West yet,'
said Daisy, 'we are pretty spectacular in our loyalty, and as for speeches, we just revel in them—but who is going to make your speeches for you, Evelyn?'

'Oh the trustees will be there—Mr.
Hardie and—'

'I hope you are not confiding in Jim Hardie for a speech, Evelyn, he's the dearest little man in the settlement
but he'd sink through the floor if you asked him to say a "few words," which is the usual prelude to half an hour's prosing—if it were his wife now—'

'Perhaps, if you give Miss Raye a chance, Daisy, you may hear who the speakers are,' said Bert.

'I think Mr. Jordan will be there, and Dr Casey from town has promised to speak to the children.'

'Old Dr. Casey!' exclaimed Tom Dennis, 'Why, who would have thought such an old bachelor would give an address to a lot of little boys and girls?'

'He was in the school last week to see if all the children were vaccinated four or five of the ones just starting school, and I asked him if he would come on Thursday and give a talk to the children afterwards. (I knew him when I was up in Sweden, and he was always very nice to me—but why are you smiling, Mr. Dennis?'

'The doctor is an awfully fine man,'
said Tom, 'and everybody respects him
and I know he can make a good rattling good political speech, but I hope he won't warm up too much, Miss Raye, or—' and Tom hesitated.

'Or what, Mr. Dennis? Now you must tell me.'

'Well, you know, Miss Raye, though he is a very good speaker—if he gets roused a little on such things as patriotism and loyalty, and anybody checks him in the least—why, he sometimes uses words that are not in the vocabulary of good little boys, you know.'

'That's too bad of you Tom; it's just jealousy—trying to prejudice you against our most eligible old bachelor, Evelyn. I'll go over to school with you and try and bring back the doctor for the afternoon—now, who'll go for a walk? I promised to show Miss Raye the view from the big spruce on the hill—will you come, Mr. Raye?—
and you can come too, Tom, to talk crops to Mr. Raye while Evelyn and I admire the scenery.'

The four of them started out together. Whether Daisy was as entirely innocent as her words suggest,

who can tell?—but long before they reached the big spruce the quartette was dissolved into two duets, and it or crops was much in Tom Dennis'
mind as he walked along by Evelyn's side.

AN IRISHMAN'S LUCK

Our Serial Story

always grow twice as much as we can eat, and then we kids have to go tooting peas and beans and flowers and a whole lot of truck to all the old ladies in the parish—I think it is just foolishness.

'You're a badly used boy, Tad,' said Tom, laughing at the entire good humour with which Tad stated his grievances, 'you'll have to run away from your stoney-hearted parent. How would you like to come up and keep "batch" with us at Connemara Farm for a while?'

'It would be just splendid,' said Tad eagerly, 'I'm to go and stay at the Enderby's in the Fall for the threshing if I pass my exam. this term—I haven't been working very hard at school this winter—you see there is skating and a whole lot of other things that must be done—but you bet I'm going to work now, for it's worth while.'

'Well, you are an immoral little beggar in the way you put it—but I'll ask your dad to let you come over for a day's shooting while you are at the Dingle—how will that suit you? Can you handle a gun?'

'Well, I'm not exactly a dab at it,' said Tad modestly, 'you see, Rex is four years older than me, and when we go out he takes turns shooting with Dad, and I carry the game. Still, I was out with Dad alone a few times down among the willows by the river when the first snow came last Fall, and I've shot three rabbits—not running of course—still, I shot them.'

'Well, that's a bargain, Tad, there are all kinds of partridges and prairie chickens round our place, and we'll have a great time.'

'And when you ask Dad, Mr. Dennis, would you mind saying, in a kind of casual way, that you are very careful with a gun, and never carry it full cock or get through a wire fence without taking the shells out—just to make Dad easy, you know?'

'You're a wise boy, Tad, I see, and know how to bring up a father properly—now I guess you had better run in and tell Miss Raye I'm ready.'

'I'm just going, Mr. Dennis—but say, did you see the brother?—the school-marm is an awfully nice girl—I should not mind having her for a teacher myself,' said Tad, patronizingly, 'but he's some English. He came around the garden with me while mother was getting the lunch ready—he's been to some college in England where they are supposed to learn how to farm—and he's quite a learned guy—I was planting potatoes in hills with a hoe, and he asked me if we did not cut the "tubers"—tubers indeed! I told him we didn't grow tubers here, but just common potatoes, and then, you see that row of pinks Dad has put along the border—well, he got poking amongst them, and said he was glad to see the Dianthus vulgaris grew here—vulgaris! I'll bet they are no more "vulgaris" than the flowers in the Old Country.'

'Well Tad, you scoot now or he will be saying that I am an Irishman vulgaris to keep them waiting—I'll just turn the rig round and be ready—and there's Jim Hardie and the wagon just coming down the street.'

Tad hurried into the house and soon reappeared with his father, Miss Raye, and her brother, and in a few minutes a start was made—Tom and Miss Raye in the buckboard leading, followed more slowly by the wagon, which was well laden with numerous boxes and miscellaneous packages.

Many a time afterwards did Tom Dennis call back to his memory his first drive with Evelyn Raye, and try to reconstruct its details, but in some elude him. When soon after dusk he strange way the details seemed to turned into the lane at the Dingle it seemed to him as if he had known Evelyn a long, long time ago, and as if the drive had been a kind of a dream. He knew that if he had told her all about his own life at home in Ireland as a boy, about his mother, about the aimless way in which he had lived in the West. He did not know how or why he had talked so freely and easily about many things that he never before had dreamt of allowing to pass beyond his lips—the real past was become the dream and the only reality the future and the only future Evelyn Raye.

Chapter VI A Seasonable Greeting

Evelyn Raye fell very easily and natrally into the family life at the Dingle, and within a very few days dropped the apologetic tone in which at first she alluded to the necessity of her own daughters taking their part in the menial work of the household.

'I don't know, I'm sure, what their dear Grandpapa would feel if he could see Marion and Daisy doing the washing and such washes as we have when their father and brother are doing the harrowing,' she remarked to Evelyn as she was cutting some sandwiches for the latter's lunch to take to school on the Monday morning following her how vexed he, that's my father I mean, Miss Raye, used to be if even the faintest suggestion of boiling cabbage reached his study where he was writing his sermon, and you know how pervasive even Brussel sprouts will be if you leave the kitchen door open for a minute—and here we are boiling the clothes, the steamy soapiness seems to get all over the house—and I've had two hard-boiled eggs and a little of cranberry jelly, and I do hope you will have enough.'

'Oh, thank you, Mrs. Enderby, I'm sure that will be more than enough, even for the north-west appetite that I expect will soon come back to me, and,' went on Evelyn, half amused and half touched by Mrs. Enderby's evident if rather confused thoughtfulness for her comfort, 'and I do hope you will let me be just at home and help in the house like one of your own girls; you know I'm quite used to the country, Mrs. Enderby, and I shall be ever so much happier if you will let me.'

'Well, my dear, I'm sure it is very good of you to say so, but I'm afraid you will be tired enough when you get home after having all those children round you all day, and they say some of the boys are dreadfully troublesome—and come to school without shoes and stockings—even the girls when they are quite big, I suppose it is quite harmless—though I could never let my girls do it when they went to school—though indeed, I know Daisy used to cry about it and say the other girls called her 'proudie'—indeed, one whole week she went barefoot—hid her things in the bushes at the end of the lane and put them on again before she came home, and I never discovered it till I bathed her on Saturday night, and found the soles of her feet as hard as leather and her poor little legs as red as an Indian's and covered with scratches and mosquito bites.'

'Oh, I'm not a bit afraid of the children, Mrs. Enderby, I'm used to all their little ways, and when I was up in "Sweden" I used to have some quite big boys in winter—ever so much bigger than myself—and they were much more polite in a funny foreign sort of way than many English boys I've met at home who would consider themselves quite superior.'

'Well, I'm sure I hope you will find the children at Lakeside school quite nice too,' said Mrs. Enderby rather doubtfully, 'and here's Mr Hardie coming down the lane with his buckboard—he's one of the trustees, and I know he told Bert on Saturday he would come and drive you over for your first visit to the school, and see that you had everything you wanted—so good-bye, my dear, and Daisy will come and meet you at four o'clock, and see you do not get lost on the way home'

Evelyn's first three weeks, at the Dingle passed very quickly and uneventfully. There was a small attendance at school, the bigger boys being kept at home to help in the seeding, and even some of the girls to drop potatoes or mind the children while their mothers were busy with the spring cleaning, which for Western wives often includes the whitewashing of the whole interior walls of the house and the repainting of the floors. It was usually dark and bed-time when Mr Enderby and Bert came in from the field, and they and bed-time when Mr. Enderby and Bert came in from the field, and they were out again with their teams when Evelyn would come down to her breakfast in the morning.

At last the spring rush was over, the wheat and oats were all in, and the early sown wheat already showing nicely above the ground, the house cleaning was an accomplished fact; and not at all the pretence which Daisy had pleaded for, and for some evenings the three girls had been busy with the flower garden and, with the pressed help of the chore boy, had rolled and marked out the tennis court.

The congregation at the church service, which had suffered severely from the break-up of the winter and the following rush of spring seeding, revived much in numbers if not in piety, and there was a general sense of relief from strain which expressed itself averred that Mr. Jordan's theology was distinctly modified by the larger number at church and the better state of the roads.

It was Sunday afternoon—church

ARTLAND NOTES

Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood arrived in Artland on Monday, to take a course on telephone work.

Arthur Rose made the 1st trip by car to lashburn on the 4th.

We regret to announce that the Artland correspondent has been ill for the last few days.

Mr. Cameron and his brother, from Radison, Sask., are visitors with Geo. Snell. They may locate here.

Mr. James McAlpine, of Unity, accompanied by Mrs. P. M. Florence, were visitors in town Wednesday.

Mr. Ross of the C.E. Force, (Forestry) recently arrived from Europe, on a visit to his mother, Mrs. Ross, and Mr. and Mrs. McRae.

Mr. Dogie Barker arrived here today with two carloads of cattle for Mr. J. Gordon.

Mrs. Casey's son, arrived home from the front on Wednesday, 3rd, after an absence of almost four years.

James Coe, of the C. E. Force, whose return we recently had the pleasure of reporting, has returned from a short visit to Regina where he had been on military business matters.

Jim was able only to give us a flying visit in passing through Artland and did not refer to his future plans.

Whatever they may be, we shall hope that renewed residence in this district forms an essential feature.

Of Ken Coe, we have never been overburdened with news, if thin in quantity it was however, excellent in in quality—robust health and increased weight being the leading points.

We understand that June is the probable month for having the pleasure of welcoming back Frank Wright who, by the by we observe is pictured in the Saskatoon Press as one of the Lucky five and a sergeant.

Then that matter of the "Military Medal" and the details that led to our above friend winning the distinction are points that we all look forward to hearing about.

As to what form the reception and presentation proceedings for our gallant survivors of the little Brady brigade will take, has yet to be settled, the date of return of some of the members being still a matter of uncertainty.

IN MEMORIAM
OF THEIR SON TOM WHO WAS KILLED IN ACTION, APRIL 9 1917.
Mr. and Mrs. Kitching, Artland.

Two lonely years have passed away
Since our great sorrow fell,
Still in our hearts we mourn the loss
Of him we loved so well.

Somewhere in France our hero
sleeps

To wake on earth no more,
Somewhere in Canada his parents
weep,
For their dear son that's gone
before.

A British hero to the heart,
His precious life he gave;
He died upon the battlefield
The British flag to save.

Could we have raised his dying head
Or heard his last few words,
The grief would not have been so hard

For those who loved him well.

Sleep on dear son in a soldier's grave
A grave we may never see,
But as long as life and memory last
We will always think of thee.

Ever remembered by his Father,
Mother, and also by his Sister in England.

Also in memory of their nephew Jim who fell in the same battle, April 9th 1917, at Vimy Ridge. Ever remembered by his Uncle and Aunt.

"BRED POTATOES"

BY M. J. TINLINE B.S.A.
Supt., Scott Experimental Farm.

Enquiries received at the Station indicate that there is considerable doubt as to the advisability of using potatoes from the 1918 crop for seed. The practice of planting small tubers followed for a period of years results in a rapid decrease in yield. On the other hand potatoes that have not fully ripened are considered better seed than the ripe tubers. This makes so much difference that in some potato growing sections the plan of importing northern grown seed is followed.

Last year's crop was affected by both drought and frost and as a result the tubers are small. The home grown seed, however, if off a good yielding strain may easily outyield seed bought in from the south.

While immature potatoes make the best seed the ripened potatoes are much to be preferred for table use. For northern districts early maturing sorts of the old Early Rose type or the Cobbler Group are the most satisfactory.

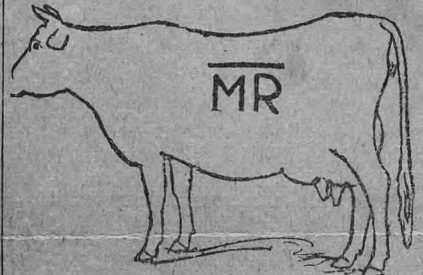

A method that can be used to secure heavy yields of mature potatoes is to develop sprouts before planting. The tubers are brought up to the light about six weeks before planting time. The potatoes are put in a single layer with the seed end up, in shallow boxes. The light of the room need not be very strong and the temperature of the room can vary from 38 to 68. The potatoes are planted whole, care being exercised to avoid breaking the sprouts.

TOMATO GROWING

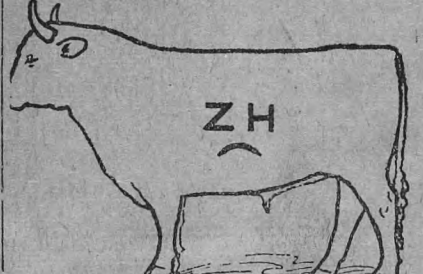

Where growers of tomatoes have a suitable place for starting plants it is recommended that they should grow their own stock. By a careful selection from individual plants from year to year a variety may be much improved from the standpoint of earliness, uniformity, and productiveness. When sown in greenhouses, in a sunny window, or in a hot-bed the seed should be sown in boxes or flats containing three or four inches of soil. The seed is usually sown in rows about four inches apart from one-quarter to one-half inch deep, the soil firmly pressed down with the hand and made moist but not too wet. When the rough leaves appear the little plants are transplanted into other flats or hot-beds about two inches apart each way. Further transplanting to about six inches apart is recommended as soon as the plants commence to crowd each other. This information is taken from Pamphlet No. 2 of the Central Experimental Farm which is available from the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa. The pamphlet deals not only with tomato culture, but mushroom culture and the forcing of rhubarb during the winter season. The soil and planting for tomatoes are fully described as well as treatment for diseases, training to the centre stem and other useful information.

The name of a Parish on the Anglesea Side of Menai Bridge, which is the only name and is in every day use, all in one word mind, without any break or pause. The natives call the place "Llanfair" but as there are other Llanfairs in Wales, some description has to be added to the Postal addresses, that to Llanfair being "Pwylgwngyll" more commonly the whole is written "Llanfair, P.G."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON:
Sunday, April 13th 1919. Christ Our Saviour: Lesson Passage John 1:35-51
Last week we learned to really think of God as our Father in heaven. We saw that he provides for his children's needs. To-day we find that our heavenly Father meets our greatest need by giving Jesus Christ to be our Saviour. Here we have the true idea of Christ.

GOLDEN TEXT—God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life.—John 3: 18 (Rev. Ver.)

Dear Children:

One of our dear readers, Robert Mc Cliskey was playing on our streets at dinner-time, Monday. He was taken ill, and as we commonly say, he died at five o'clock the next morning. In our sorrow at our loss, we must remember that God is Love, as the Golden Text above says, and that God has promised that He will be a Father to him, and he shall be His son. We must therefore think of our Robert in his new Home, where all tears are wiped away and there shall be no more sorrow. In the meanwhile we all must seek to love one another as Christ has loved us. And try to do the good work we know Robert would have done if he had been longer spared to us.

THE BRAHMAN AND THE GOAT

A Brahman who lived in the forest had been to the town to buy a goat for sacrifice, and was returning with it on his shoulders, when he was seen by three rogues, who determined to obtain his goat.

They ran ahead of him and seated themselves at the foot of three different trees.

"Why do you carry that dog, master?" said the first, with well feigned surprise.

The dog, it must be understood, is regarded as an unclean animal by the Brahmans.

"Dog!" was the indignant reply. "It is no dog at all, but a goat."

The Brahman came to the second rogue who made the same remark. This time the Brahman took the goat from his shoulder, looked well at it, and, replacing it, proceeded on his journey.

But when still a third man said the goat was a dog, the Brahman doubted the evidence of his own eyes, threw down the animal, washed himself from the pollution of the supposed dog, and hurried home. The three rogues then seized their prey, and cooked and ate it.

Be on your guard against rogues.

WHAT IT MEANS

A boy took a slate and wrote on it "ooooooooo."

"This is a new way of spelling potatoes" he said.

"How?" said his friend
"Well," he answered, "you write them down on your slate, and you will find you have put eight o's ((potatoes))."

A TONGUE TWISTER

Six white weasels, five running hares, four brown bears, three ducks, and a good fat hen.

BIGGER! BIGGER!! BIGGER!!!

Mrs. Biggar had a baby. Which was the bigger—Mrs. Biggar or the baby?

The baby was a little Biggar. Which was the bigger—Mr. Biggar or the baby?

Mr. Biggar was father (far the) Biggar.

Mr. Biggar died—was the baby then bigger than Mrs. Biggar?

No; for the baby was fatherless (far the less).

When does one feel like quarelling with the clock?

When it runs down and strikes one.

Why is it a mistake to lend money to a donkey?

Because he is most likely to pay you back in kicks than in ha'pence!

Why is a baby crying like a good resolution?

Because it should always be carried out.

Why is a pelican like a dishonest dressmaker?

Because they both know how to stretch the bill.

What goes easiest when it is tired? Why a wheel, of course.

Stationery and school supplies including a very dainty line of pads and pappetries; seventy-two page scribblers, ruled at six for a quarter or merely 4 c. each, this price could not be beaten before the war.

Eagle compasses, water colors, paints rulers, pencils, ink pens, slates, erasers, drawing books, drawing pads, books for all grades.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION EDMONTON, MAY 2-3-4

An International Sunday School Convention and Leaders' Institute for Northern Alberta will be held in Edmonton, May 2, 3 and 4. The convention will take the form of departmental conference, when the needs of Sunday School work will be discussed by those specially interested in that department.
